The KC Digital Inclusion Summit
October 17, 2014

Overall, 50% of Americans now have a dedicated handheld device-- either a tablet computer like an iPad or an e-reader such as a Kindle or Nook--for reading e-content. That figure has grown from 43% of adults who had either of those devices in September.

In addition, The survey found that 92% of adults have a cell phone(including the 55% of adults who have a smartphone), and 75% have a laptop 75% have a laptop or desktop computer--figures that have not changed in significantly from our pre-holiday survey.
